The Water Bearer had two pots that he carried across his neck. One of the pots had a crack, while the other pot was perfect and always delivered a full portion of water, the cracked pot arrived only half full. The perfect pot was proud, but the cracked pot was miserable to be a failure. It spoke one day. "I want to apologize. I have been able to deliver only half my load and we don't give full value from our efforts," The bearer said to the pot, "Did you notice the flowers on your side of the path but not on the other? Every day while we walk back, you've watered them. I have been able to pick these flowers. Without you being just the way you are, there would not be this beauty to grace my House."
